A Specimen Reformer.

In the current number of Harper's Weekly, printed before the Cabinet was an nounced, Mr. George William Curtis paves the way to come along in the next number with a high-strung Civil Service reform approval of the whole outfit, "Boss" Manning and all.

But Mr. Curtis is not content to await another trick at his own wheel. He is glad to embrace the earliest opportunity to record his delight, and he comes at it in this way in a New York World interview:

this way in a New York World interview:
As to the Cabinet no reasonable person should find fault, but there are people who will take exceptions to the appointments of Manning and Whitney, as unknown men, occupying important positions, but I feel confident that the actions of these men during their term of office of these men during their term of office will prove that "the Man of Destiny" has made no mistake in his appointments and I predict a great and glorious inture for the new administration. Mr. Rudicott may be objectionable to some professional politicians, but i my opinion he is as pure a man as this pure Cabinet possesses.

This is the great Civil Service Reformer—the man who went out of the Republican party because he longed for the pure atmosphere of the Democratic organization; who couldn't stand the action of the most popular convention ever assembled in the name of any political party—a convention which gave the party the nominee it asked; who went over to Cleveland, whose noministion was brought about by a resort to the most offensive methods, including the justly hated unit rule, which the Republican party had abandoned in disgust.

Mr. Curtis is not ignorant of Mr. Manning's political career nor of the menas by which it has been achieved. He knows the service which Manning rendered to Tweed when Tweed was plundering New York and asking her tax-payers what they were "going to do about it?" He knows why President Cleveland has called Manning and Whitney to his side. He knows also that he is in for it, and he is trying to make the best of it and get out of his bad bargain all there is in it.

It is significant, too, that at this time Mr. Curtis is talked of as one of the men upon whom the President is likely to confer high-grade diplomatic dignities. He may be longing for this recognition, or he may desire only the tender of the piece. At all events he is taking every occasion to place himself before the country as a man of brilliant inconsistency—who approves in the Democratic party more many or place himself before the country as a man of brilliant inconsistency—who approves in the Democratic party more many of th

At all events he is taking every occasion to place himself before the country as a man of brilliant inconsistency—who approves in the Democratic party more machine politics than he left behind when he went out of the Republican party. Mr. Curtis is a model "reformer."

In the matter of Treasury patronage. New York is fast becoming, if it has not already become, the Ohio of the departments. With Manning at the helm the Empire State is not likely to suffer. Manning is the kind of politician who works through a machine, and he is in the habit of having machine men to serve him. He is the prince of spoilsmen, and he isn't likely to be embarrassed by any nice scruples when it comes to bundling out "offensive partisans" to put in pur patriots of the Democratic stripe.

If Cleveland hadn't wanted a boss a the head of the Treasury he wouldn't have lifted up Daniel Manning. Cleveland's second term campaign has already begun. He knows that he must have New York to nominate and elect him. Therefore he calls to his aid Whitney and Manning-money and the machine-and sails in savagely for reform.

THE CABINET

Leaves an Unpleasant Taste in an Esteemed Cotemporary's Mouth.

to take from New York a President untried in national affairs without joining to him apparently from mere personal and local favoriteism, two advisers equally lacking in official experience. There is good ground for such an opinion, and we apprehend that the President will be made very senable of its force before he has gone many miles through the political Black Forest he has undertaken to explore. Along with it comes also the reasonable complaint of a great section of the country that it has been not merely ignored, but in a manner repulsed. It will be said, and with perfect truth, that Mr. Cleveland has declined alike solicitations and counsels touching able, honorable and useful public men, who had earned of him, and of the country and of their party, both recognition and promotion. The character and temper of these expressions will vary, as men are controlled by their judgment or their passions. Our own opinion is that, in this matter, the President has made a mistake.

Japan as a Fighting Power.

Japan as a Figiting Power.

London India News.

M. Tasima, the superintendent of those Japanese officers who are pursuing their military studies in Europe, has supplied a correspondent with some accounts of his country's position as a fighting power. The standing army of the empire consists of 40,000 men, the reserve of 80,000, and the landwarh, or territorial reserve, of 150,000. All these troops are dressed and equipped in European lashion, and they are at present partly armed with Reminglantons and partly with Sniders. A new ride, llowever, the invention of a Japanese Colonel, will shortly be ready for issue. It combines the merits of the Gras, the Chesepot and the Meaner system, and English officers who have tested it speak highly both of its principle and of its workmanship. In Japan service is obligatory, the conscript, after remaining for three years with the colors, passing into the services. Even after his discharge from the land wehr he forms one, provided that he be less than 45 years of age, of a kind of National Guard that can be called out for purposes of home defense. Certain classes are by law exempted from active service abroad, but every Japanese, without exception, has to learn the use of arms as the price of his citizenship.
